Vinnies Queensland needs winter warmers

Vinnies is looking for a helping hand from the public to keep the community rugged up and warm this winter.

Vinnies General Manager of Operations Roberta Jays said Vinnies are keen to keep plenty of quality winter items in stock.

“Winter is a time where families in need are on the lookout for blankets and warm clothes, but we find in winter that donations can tend to drop off,” she said.

With the mercury dipping lower, Ms Jays said donations are critical at this time of year.

“We are seeing an increase in people coming into our shops looking for warm clothing, whether that be jumpers, jackets or beanies,” she said.

“We are calling for the public to give any of their quality winter items that they no longer use a new life, because the need is there.”

“We need clean winter clothing in good condition, especially men’s and women’s long pants, we are also needing knitwear, tops, jackets and shoes at present.”

Ms Jays said it’s important for people to remember that donating to Vinnies helps the charity fund its many services and programs that assist struggling Queenslanders.

“We rely on the generosity of the public and every dollar spent in a Vinnies shop goes back into the local community,” she said.

“If people in need come into the shops looking for warm clothes we are able to connect them to our Vinnies Helpline so they can get gift cards to our shops so they can select what they require.”

Ms Jays said the best way for people to donate is in person.

“We always encourage people to donate in the shop during opening hours wherever possible as many of our shops are now open on weekends.”
